Summer Reading Tips

Summer should not mean taking a break from learning, especially when it comes to reading. Studies show that most students experience a loss of reading skills over the summer months, but children who continue to read actually gain skills. During the summer, parents can help children sustain (and even bolster) reading skills, strengthen their vocabulary and reinforce the benefits of reading for enjoyment. Children need free time, away from structured academic learning, and summer is the perfect time to relax and enjoy the pleasures of childhood. So summer reading should be fun. The following are a few tips to make summer reading enjoyable for your child/children: (1) Read aloud together with your child every day. (2) Set a good example - keep a lot of reading material around the house and allow your child to see both mom and dad reading. (3) Let your child choose what they want to read. (4) Buy books on tape or check them out at the local library. (5) As you go throughout the day, cooking, gardening grocery shopping, utilize the time to engage in verbal word play, vocabulary building, new word meaning. (6) Take your child to the library on a regular basis. (7) Subscribe, in your child's name to magazines like Sports Illustrated for Kids or Highlights for Children. This is another great way to engage them in reading and discussion. (8) Ease disappointment over summer break from a friend by writing letters or sending postcards from favorite vacation spots. If both children have access to the Internet, e-mail is another great way to communicate. (9) Trips can be fun as well. Introduce your child to maps and traffic signs. These are just a few reading activities that parents can do with their children over the summer months. Enjoy!

Quote of the month

"My advice is to find fuel in failure. Sometimes failure gets you closer to where you want to be."
